

"A New Year's Rant"

Editorial

One of the benefits as the editor, is writing the editorial and knowing that it is read, and hopefully digested. The movement of the equipment is everybody's responsibility. As we are indoors, do you know where the equipment is stored? Do you know how to load the trolley? I have stood back a couple of times this year and watched, and you would be surprised at how many people consider that it's not their job. So, where's the club spirit?

Rant over, the number of people attending the indoors seasons has been disappointing, but on the upside, those who were there, had a fantastic time and were using the limited time wisely. If you were one of those who did not attend the indoor sessions, then let me know, I will treat the comments as anonymous, but as a club we need to understand the lack of participation.

Please remember that Mick is doing his Level 2 Coaching course, so if he asks for your help, don't say no.

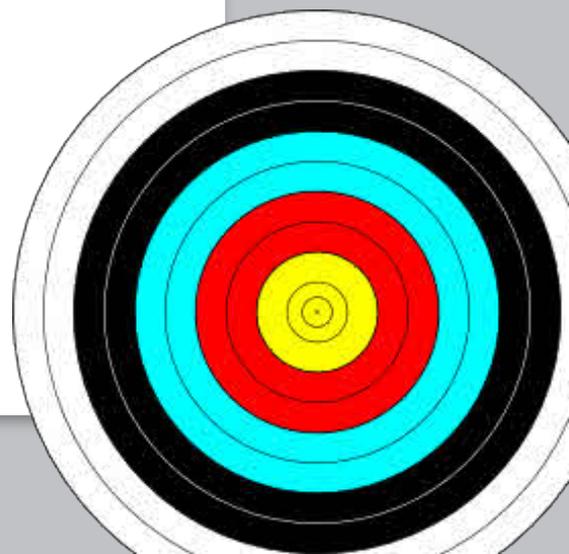

Please check the website for any changes/times of club competitions.

ArcheryUK autumn 2014 magazine

Lutterworth archers in print. Instead of where's Wally let's play where's Gaynor. Have a look in the latest issue of the magazine, but she is not wearing a striped hat.

Auntie Val

If you have an archery problem, let Auntie Val help

Email: news@lutterwortharchery.org.uk

Dear Val,

This sounds funny when I say it to other archers, but to me it is now a sore issue. My string catches the end of my nose, not every arrow, but enough of the time to mean by the end of the shooting day, my nose is sore, with some skin removed.

Yours Patch Conque

Dear Patch

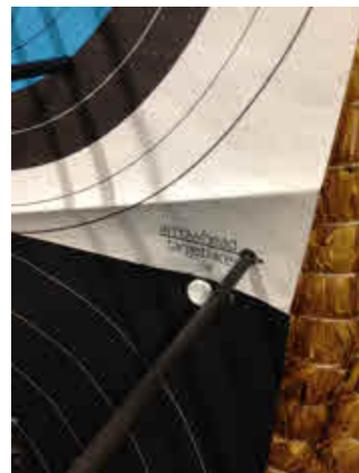

I have to admire your fortitude in putting up with this for a whole 'shooting day'. From the fact that it doesn't happen every time, it's clear that you have an inconsistent reference point. In fact it sounds as if you draw back towards your ear. If your reference point was where it should be, i.e fairly central under your chin, you would find the string would be on the tip, or in front, of your nose and not to the side. When other archers laugh it is relief that they don't have the problem,

Just ignore the insensitive sods.

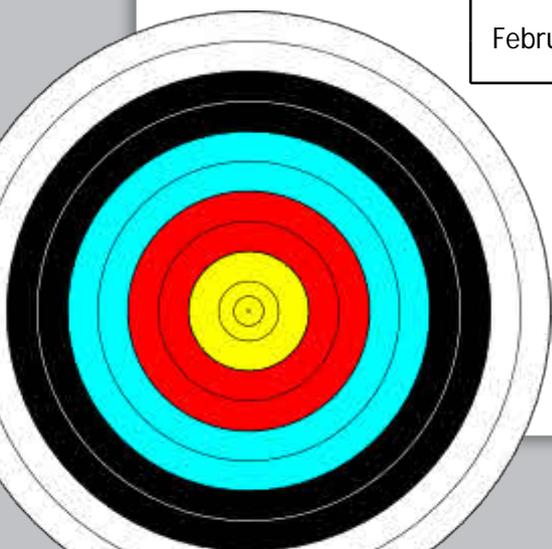

Val

Martin is a crack shot

An archers ability is measured by the hit a target repeated. Martin shunned this and chose the smallest object on the target face and took the centre out of it, please see his handiwork in the pictures.

Post Christmas Meal

And so another year has passed and we found ourselves sitting down eagerly awaiting the fine food produced by the Chef at Kilworth Springs Golf Club.

We were not disappointed. Once again, the food and the company were both excellent, everyone appeared to enjoy the selections they had made, with special mention of Chris Matkin who made a valiant effort to eat all the roast parsnips!

My spies noted vast quantities of alcohol being consumed by some of our party, but they weren't driving so why not!?

There are pictures of this event but some are currently being screened by the Committee to check none of them were captured in a compromising position.

Finally, as per every year so far, the staff had to linger near the doors to give a gentle hint that it was time to go. Once again we were the last to leave.

Breaking News!.....An anonymous source (thanks Mick) has reported that someone in our party tried to snaffle a free pudding, but got busted by the Management and had to pay up....no names, but they have a sister called Sharon J

All good fun for another year. Special thanks go to Martin for making all the necessary arrangements, and managing to squeeze the money out of me!!

I missed because ... hitting the target is easy

I missed because ... fibbing about hitting the target is so much easier
